As the hordes of barbari swarmed across Gaul and Iberia in the years after the main invasion of 406, tribes fanned out to plunder in every direction.

One band of Vandals marched to Subulter.

The "German Barbari" near Mainz (now Germany) moved over the frozen river ice to attack.

The fur-clad Germans from lands known as Alans, the SUEVES, and the Vandals. The Roman garrison had been fatally depleted; most of the men had been pulled off the RHINE frontier to join a desperate counterattack against yet another army of barbari.

the Ostrogoths, then invading the Balkans no one had counted on the Rhine freezing over - a rare occurrence. Also, the Germans were themselves fleeing the savage invasion of their country by the HUNS.

Rome watched helplessly as the main hordes and other waves of invaders poured across borders that had been held for 400 years.
